DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

Applicant's arguments regarding the claimed "signal" have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant alleges that "claim 13 recites a practical use for the signal, namely the signal creates a plurality of identifiers in an ordered sequence and allows them to appear in a range represented by first and second subfields". In response, the examiner respectfully disagrees. Claim 13 does not require the signal to create any identifier or to allow identifiers to appear in a range as alleged by the applicant. Claim 13 merely recites a data signal comprising of purely descriptive material, thus cannot provide any practical application.

Applicant further alleges that the specification explains why this is useful and practical. In response, although claims are interpreted in light of the specification, the specification cannot be read into the claims.

Applicant argues that newly added claims 16-23 recite an electromagnetic signal for use in a receiving device, thus are statutory. In response, the examiner respectfully disagrees. The "for use in a receiving device" merely describes an intended use of the signal. However, the electromagnetic signal recited in claims 16-23 consists of mere arrangement of non-functional data that does not exhibit any functional interrelationship with the way in which computing processes are performed. Therefore, such descriptive material is considered non-statutory subject matter because it does not constitute a statutory manufacture, process, machine or composition of matter.

For all the reasons discussed above, rejection to all claims under 35 U.S.C. 101 is maintained.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 13, 16-23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. Claims 13, 16-23 recite mere arrangement of non-functional data that does not exhibit any functional interrelationship with the way in which computing processes are performed. Therefore, such descriptive material is considered non-statutory subject matter because it does not constitute a statutory manufacture, process, machine or composition of matter.

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
